A BIG LEAGUER HERE WITH WOFFORD CLUB

VON KOLNITZ TALKE BASEBALL AND IS NOT A BIT WORRIED

"STRINGS" ON HIM

Cincinnati Still Has Claim on Famous South Carolina Backstop and He May Return.

Fritz Von Kolnitz, probably the most sensational backstop ever turned out from a South Carolina college, was in the city yesterday afternoon, coming here with the Wofford university baseball team, which club he has coached this season.

Von Kolnitz began his career in the professional game with Charleston, playing with that club in the Sally league after leaving the University of South Carolina. He was considered one of the best players of the team while attending school at the College of Charleston, and at the university he further distinguished himself, thus attracting the attention of the South Atlantic league managers. He soon proved himself fitted for better company, and as a result he was sold to the Cincinnati "Reds" of the national league, which club now has "strings" on him.

"It looks as if you were pretty severely rapped on by Clemson in the recent game staged at Spartanburg," idly remarked the reporter as Von Kolnitz was lining up his men for the game yesterday afternoon.

"Yes," he replied, "they have been giving it to us on all sides, but we're still on the job." The big leaguer looked about as much worried as Connie Mack did following the first licking his club gave the New York Giants in the world series of 1913, and he turned away smilingly to give directions to his club.

Von Kolnitz said he had no plans for the future, at least he had none for publication. He remarked that the "Reds" still had strings on him, as he had a three-year contract with that club, and until that was out he could not play professional baseball unless it was with Cincinnati. It is considered likely that he will return there when his work at Wofford is completed.

TONAL QUALITY

is a term that does not exclusively belong to music.

Paderewski, Hoffman, Ysaye, Rendegeer—all these, to be sure, possess "tonal quality," but the term may also be applied without the least strain to the character of our business.

If you wish to see the most fastidious Gem Things and the newest and best in Jewelry of all kinds in this locality you are forced to come here.

If you wish to see the lowest prices for sound quality, you again are forced to come here.
